

Self Supervised Learning

Supervised learning without human-annotated labels. There are still labels involved (since the learning has to be supervised by something), but they are generated from the input data itself, typically using a heuristic algorithm

Reinforcement learning

In reinforcement learning, an "agent" receives information about its environment and learns to pick actions that will maximize some reward.

